

PAMELA TAYLOR

Hope you're having a great year so far. I certainly am. It's been nice to start easing back into some things that feel a bit more like normal life.

And to that end, I'm planning to participate in the Texas Book Festival in Austin at the end of October. The festival is hybrid this year – online Monday-Friday and in person on the weekend (30-31 October). I'll be signing and selling books in one of the exhibitor booths that will be set up on the Capitol grounds. They haven't yet assigned booth locations, but I'll post that on the Events page of pamela-taylor.com just as soon as it's available.

So if you're anywhere in the vicinity of Central Texas that weekend, make plans to drop by – I always enjoy meeting and chatting with readers. And there will be so many authors and publishers there – so many opportunities to feed your passion for reading.

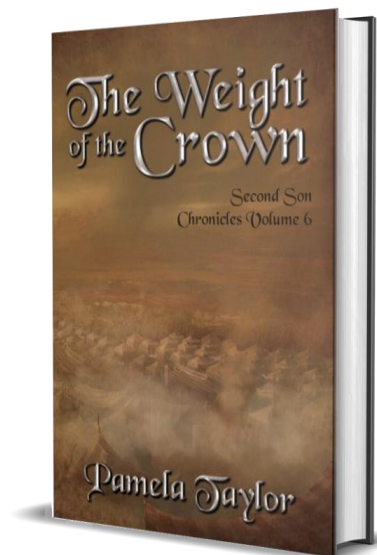

The timing of the festival is really pretty special for me – Volume 6 of the Second Son Chronicles will be released on 14 October, so it'll be brand-shiny-new just in time for my first in-person event in way too long.

As promised, you get to see the cover first, before I reveal it on the website or social media. The kingdom is at peace, old alliances are strong, and new ones are forming. Is it all too good to be true?

A Bit of Self-Congratulations

The series was named a finalist for fiction series in the 2021 Next Generation Indie Book Awards. First time I've received an actual physical medal for anything. Gotta' admit, I was pretty over the moon to get such wonderful recognition for my books.
